

WELCOME TO CAMPUS LIVE

● USING THE PLATFORM

You will never appear on the screen.

➡ Your camera will NEVER be turned on.

THIS LESSON IS ABOUT:

WORK APPRAISALS

Welcome!

- ✓ Tell us a little bit about yourself.
 - ✓ Where have you lived?
 - ✓ What do you do for a living?
 - ✓ What is the relevance of this English course to your career path?

23 - 05 - 2026

Starting Point

- What do you know about work appraisals?
- Why is feedback important?
- How do you react to negative feedback?
- When was the last time you received a performance appraisal?

performance review
employee evaluation
annual review

What do you know about work appraisals?

Work appraisals are meetings where managers evaluate an employee's performance, strengths, and areas for improvement.

Why is feedback important?

Feedback is important because it helps people improve, learn from mistakes, and understand what they are doing well.

How do you react to negative feedback?

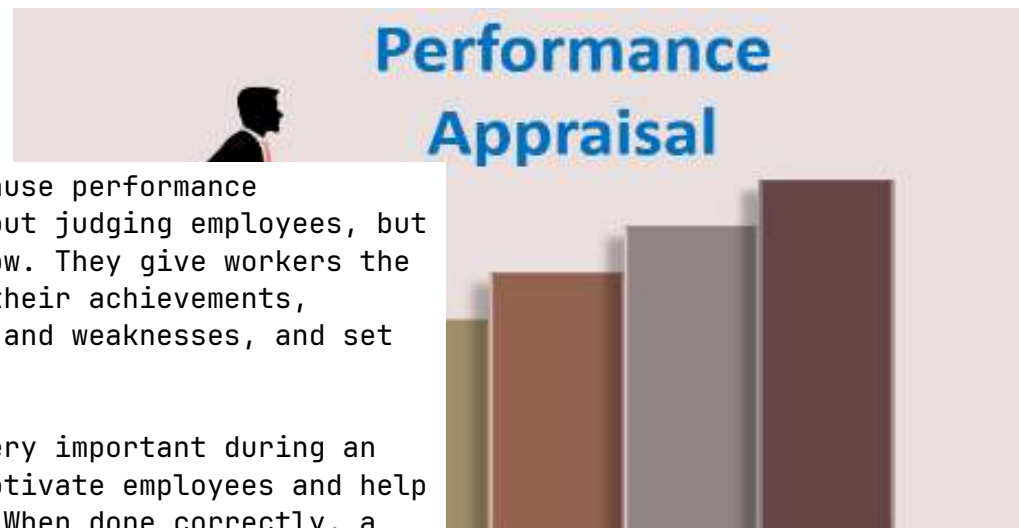

I try to stay calm and listen carefully. I see negative feedback as an opportunity to improve and grow professionally.

When was the last time you received a performance appraisal?

The last time I received a performance appraisal was during my internship / last job, where we discussed my progress and future goals.

Read the quote below and express your thoughts.

"Performance appraisal is a powerful tool. It provides a chance to look back on your accomplishments and map out the next steps in your career." - Carly Fiorina

I agree with the quote because performance appraisals are not only about judging employees, but also about helping them grow. They give workers the opportunity to reflect on their achievements, understand their strengths and weaknesses, and set new professional goals.

I also think feedback is very important during an appraisal because it can motivate employees and help them improve their skills. When done correctly, a performance appraisal can increase confidence, productivity, and career development.

Definition

Read and organize the phrases to form a definition.

...evaluates an employee's job performance and provides feedback on their accomplishments, strengths, and areas needing improvement.

Work appraisal, also known as performance appraisal or employee appraisal, is a systematic process in which an employer...

It is a critical aspect of performance management and...

...is typically conducted on a regular basis, often annually.

Primary Purposes of Appraisals

Feedback: Providing employees with feedback on their performance, can help them understand their strengths and weaknesses.

Goal Setting: Setting clear, achievable objectives and expectations for employees, often linked to their job roles and the organization's objectives.

Professional Development: Identifying areas where employees can enhance their skills and capabilities and offering support for their growth.

Reward and Recognition: Recognizing and rewarding exceptional performance through promotions, salary increases, or other incentives.

Communication: Facilitating communication between employees and managers, allowing them to discuss job performance, expectations, and career goals.

Communication, Reward and Recognition, Goal Setting, Professional Development

Explain and give an example under each point.

Benefits of Performance Appraisal

Read and match.

Vocabulary	Definition
Feedback	The process of assessing an employee's job performance and providing feedback on their strengths and weaknesses. Feedback
Performance Evaluation	Information or comments provided to an employee regarding their work performance, often with the aim of improvement. Job Performance
Career Goals	The practice of defining specific, measurable objectives or targets to be achieved in a set period, often as part of the performance appraisal process. Goal Setting
Strengths and Weaknesses	A scheduled meeting between an employee and their supervisor or manager to discuss their job performance, achievements, and areas for development. Appraisal Meeting
Appraisal Meeting	The qualities and skills in which an employee excels (strengths) and areas where they may need improvement (weaknesses). Performance Evaluation
Goal Setting	An evaluation of how well an employee performs their job, often measured against established performance metrics and objectives. Performance Evaluation
Job Performance	The objectives and ambitions an individual has for their professional development and advancement in their career. These goals can include promotions, skill development, or new roles within the organization. Strengths and Weaknesses

Types of Feedback

Match the terms with their definitions.

Explanation

- I. Also known as praise or reinforcement, this type of feedback is used to acknowledge and appreciate good performance or behavior. It reinforces positive actions and encourages the individual to continue with their efforts. E Positive feedback
- II. Focuses on identifying areas for improvement. It is specific, actionable, and provides suggestions for change without being overly critical D Summative feedback
- III. Addresses performance issues or undesirable behavior. It is important to be tactful and specific in delivering negative feedback to avoid discouraging the individual. B Negative feedback
- IV. This feedback involves input from multiple sources, including supervisors, peers, subordinates, and even self-assessment. C 360-degree feedback
- V. Typically given after the completion of a task, project, or evaluation. It provides an overall assessment of the individual's performance or outcome.

A Constructive feedback

Feedback Type

- A. Constructive feedback
- B. Negative feedback
- C. 360-degree feedback
- D. Summative feedback
- E. Positive feedback

Read the feedback below and choose the appropriate option.

"Juan, I noticed you have come into work later than usual and missed the beginning of yesterday's meeting. I am worried you did not hear important information concerning our project that may affect your tasks this week. Let's go over what you missed, and I would like to know if something is affecting your arrival at work. We can develop a plan to ensure you do not miss future meetings to help you stay up-to-date."

What kind of feedback is this?

A. Negative

B. Positive

C. Constructive

How Employees React to Appraisals

Read and find the synonyms of the words in bold.

Employees' reactions to feedback can vary widely. Some eagerly embrace it as an opportunity for growth, while others may initially feel defensive or apprehensive. Effective feedback, delivered constructively, often inspires positive changes and fosters a culture of continuous improvement. Open communication, trust, and support play key roles in shaping how employees perceive and respond to feedback. Over time, as they recognize the value of feedback in their personal and professional development, employees tend to become more receptive and appreciative of constructive input.

see

motivates

welcome

anxious

Evaluation Forms

Look at the picture and answer.

You are a temporary employee at BeeBee Enterprises. Evaluate yourself.

Temporary Employee Evaluation Form

Employee Name:	FERNANDO PASTOR
Position held by Employee:	FULL-STACK DEVELOPER
Assignment Dates:	2026-05-23
Supervisor:	FERNANDO RIPOLL	Phone Number:	555-123123
Agency/ Division:	ABIONICA SOLUTIONS

Please rate each item on the following scale

	Great		Neutral		Poor
	1	2	3	4	5
Attendance	☒	☐	☐	☐	☐
Punctuality	☐	☒	☐	☐	☐
Quality of Work	☒	☐	☐	☐	☐
Skill level	☐	☒	☐	☐	☐
Interaction w/ Others	☐	☒	☐	☐	☐
Attitude	☒	☐	☐	☐	☐

Comments:

Form completed by: _____

Date completed: _____

Let's Review!

✓ What is the difference between the two?

Work appraisal also known as a performance review or evaluation, is a specific event within the performance management process while performance management is the ongoing process that involves setting clear expectations, monitoring progress, providing feedback, and developing employees to achieve their full potential. It encompasses a broader approach to managing and improving employee performance.

Today we learned...

- ✓ Work appraisal vocabulary.
- ✓ How employees react to work appraisals.
- ✓ Different types of feedback.
- ✓ The difference between performance management and appraisal.
- ✓ How to fill in the performance evaluation form with appropriate details.

● WORK APPRAISALS

THANK YOU!!

info@campus.live