Welcome!

Phrasal Verbs

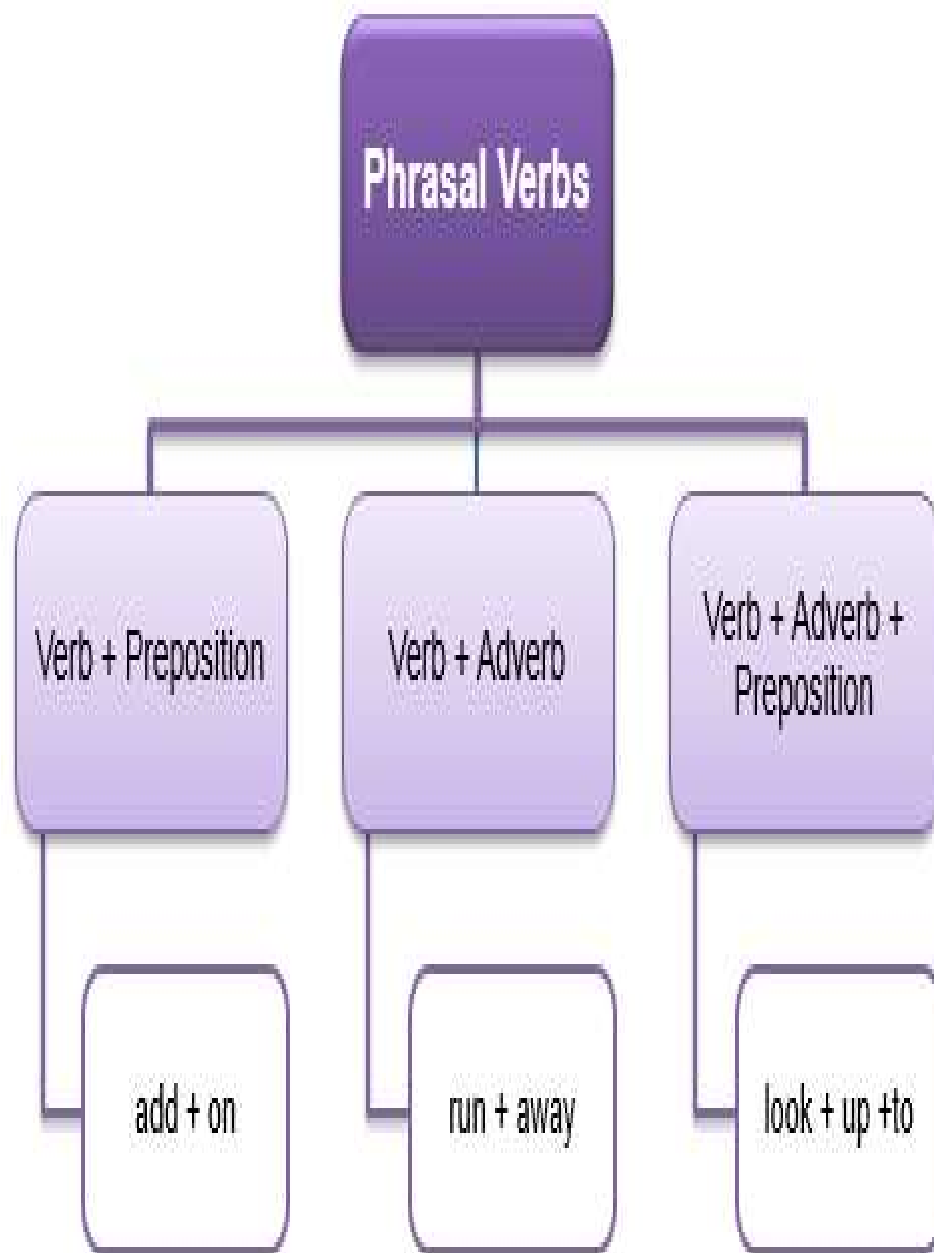

Phrasal verbs are very common in spoken English, especially in informal (casual) speech.

A phrasal verb is similar to an idiom — it is a phrase that has a special meaning.

Phrasal verbs have a main verb and another word that is usually either an adverb or a preposition. Sometimes they have both, an adverb and a preposition.

- Let's get together on Tuesday. (main verb + adverb)
- I decided to put off the meeting until next week. (main verb + preposition)
- I ran out of sugar, I need to buy more.

1. What's the meaning of the phrasal verbs in the examples?
2. Use them in another sentence.

Adverb or Preposition?

With a phrasal verb (verb + adverb), the position of the object (a noun) is flexible, i.e., it can sit either between the verb and the adverb or after the adverb:

- She picks the phone up.

(The object "the phone" is between the verb and the adverb.)

or

- She picks up the phone.

(The object "the phone" is after the adverb.)

With prepositional verbs (verb + preposition), the position of the object—regardless of whether it's a noun or pronoun—is not flexible. The object must sit after the preposition:

- We had to hold on for a while.

5 Secrets to Learning Phrasal verbs

Match the tip with the correct explanation.

- | | |
|-----------------------------|--|
| 1. Don't group them by verb | a. If you like writing fiction, you can create one of this, using a few phrasal verbs. If not, then you can simply write a paragraph related to your life. This will help you create connections between the words and your experiences and, it'll help you immensely in remembering them. |
| 2. Group them by particle | b. You could create a phrasal verb list for expressing emotions, describing friends, or talking about love and relationships , for example. |
| 3. Group them by topic | c. Learning phrasal verbs by watching YouTube videos, listening to songs or reading any authentic content is so powerful because you can see how we use them in real life. |
| 4. Learn them in context | d. Not only is this the worst way to learn phrasal verbs, but it's also the fastest way to make yourself hate them. Why? Because you're trying to memorize a bunch of words that all look the same but have completely different meanings. And that's confusing! |
| 5. Use them in a story | e. This can help you make relevant connections between them. That's because the particles have tendencies, and if you understand these tendencies, it'll make learning phrasal verbs a bit easier. |

Let's apply these five tips...

Which one do you think would be more effective for you?

The Particle “Up”

Remember: the best way to learn phrasal verbs is by particle not by verb.

What can be the meaning of the particle “up”? The first thought could be a movement in the direction of the sky. For example, “stand up”. “To stand” means to be on your feet. And so, to “stand up”, which indicated a movement upward.

“Up” can also indicate “better”. For example “to make up” -which has two meanings, as many phrasal verbs (see on the right). Imagine we are having a fight, and afterward we “make up”. We made things better, we made up and now we are friends again.

How about meaning something new? I can “come up with” an idea or “make up” a new story.

- ✓ Think of another phrasal verb with the particle “up” and analyze the meaning.

The Particle “On”

Fill in the blanks.

We can use the _____ “on” to describe movement forward. “To go on” means to continue; to go forward. The same happens _____ “move on”, it shows that there should be movement forward.

But how _____ placing something on top of something else? “Can you please put that on the table?” You were asked to _____ something on top of a table.

With a little bit of _____, we could even derive some type of dependence from the _____ point. “You can depend on me” or “count on me”.

The Particle “Back”

Fill in the blanks with the correct verb.

If you have any questions, you can always “_____ back” on the topic in the future. “Back” here means to return. There are many examples of this. The one I gave means that we can always return to a specific topic that we spoke about before. Or that missed call (never: lost call) that you need to “_____ back”?

How about when you bought a product and you’re not sure you actually want to keep it, you can “_____ it back” to the shop. With a little bit of luck, you “_____ back” your money as well.

Group them by topic: Clothing

Identify the phrasal verb in each sentence and infer its meaning from context.

1. I think I need to go on a diet. I can't get into my jeans.
2. These jeans are too small for me. I'll give them away to my friend.
3. Do these shoes go with this dress?
4. I'm looking for my slippers. Do you know where they are?
5. It's really difficult to pick out a dress. They're all so beautiful.
6. I need to pick up my suit from the dry cleaners today.
7. Teenagers never put away their clothes.
8. Put on a coat. It's cold.
9. Take off that hat. It looks ridiculous.
10. Don't throw away clothes. Recycle them instead.
11. I always try on shoes before I buy them.
12. Children wear out their clothes quickly because they play so much.
